DEATH OF HON. J. M. PELHAM.

Agelo has the noble messenger entered our midst and called to everlasting rest our beloved citizen, Hon. J. M. Pelham, who died at his residence on Krebs' avenue, Saturday, July 2, 1898, at 11 o'clock a. m.

John Mass Pelham was born in St. Stephens, Ala., March 27, 1850. Emigrating to West Pascagoula he engaged in the crocetting and lumber business. At the age of 23 he married Miss Eva Gautier, and together they continued their residence at West Pascagoula until about two years ago when they moved to Scranton. Ten children were the result of this happy union, six of whom survive him: two daughters and four sons. In 1888 the citizens of this county attested their appreciation of his worthiness and elected him to the Legislature, and the compliment was repeated in 1890, so faithfully did he perform the duties of his office. He was an engineer by profession and served with Capt. Kead at the jettes.

The last act of kindness we can perform is the closing scene of all when we follow the remains to their last resting place, and the lure to which Mr. Pelham was held by his friends was shown by the large concourse which accompanied his bereaved family in the cemetery. The funeral sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. W. T. Beall, of Moss Point. The services were conducted by the Odd Fellows, a member of which order he had been for a number of years.

He was laid to rest in the Gautier family cemetery, at West Pascagoula. Besides his immediate family, he leaves one brother and one half brother to mourn his loss.

IN MEMORIAM.
DIED—On Friday, July 1, 1898, at 10:15 a. m., in the 30th year of her age, MARQUETTE WHITE, wife of Martin Turnbull.

This Christianity alone hath power to rob death of its terrors, to illumine the dark passage of the trembling soul from this life to eternity, and, at the same time, lighten the heavy load of affliction that ever follows the loss of a beloved object, is a truth to which even the hopeless creed of unbelief dare not give denial. In the life of the subject of this notice—a life wherein the duties of child, of wife and of mother were fulfilled with unselfish devotion—with sweet and tender solicitude for the welfare of those depending upon her—we have an instance of that true Christian character, which, ever subservient to conscience guided by religion, makes, of the humblest home, a heaven upon earth. Such was Marquette Turnbull, who, through some woe, though uncaused, despoil of Providence, was so suddenly removed from a home, where dwelt because of her presence, the angels of peace, of content, of happiness, the handmaidens of wifely and maternal love.

The simple and uneventful record of a life.

Hunting Camp Afloat

The Pelhams' Houseboat

For years, the Pelham houseboat has taken its place on the Pascagoula River for the opening weekend of duck season. Generations of family members have hunted and fished the river, and the houseboat has been a part of those activities for the last 60 years.

The houseboat's barge is made of cypress and was built in Gautier in 1933. The three original owners were Jim Pelham; his son, Bud Pelham; and Tom Dantzler, who was married to Jim's daughter.

A year or two later, a two-bunk cabin was built on the barge. Lighting was provided by kerosene lanterns, and the boat was equipped with a small coal stove and an icebox.

Since then the cabin has been enlarged to house six bunks; a 12-volt electrical system, a butane stove, and a refrigerator have been added. But the family tradition of setting up a base on the river has remained the same.

The rustic houseboat is pushed up the river by two skiffs. Regular hunters include the grandson of Jim Pelham, also named Jim; great-grandsons Mike Stewart, Tim Stewart, and Jamie Pelham; and one great-great-grandson, Austin Stewart.

Tradition extends to mealtimes during duck season's opening weekend. Dinner on the first night is always spaghetti. Breakfast is served after the morning hunt—some houseboaters are assigned to cook while others clean the ducks, which are later served in a stew along with mashed potatoes.

Over the years, the houseboat owners have hosted a number of Pascagoula sportsmen who feel lucky to be included in this family tradition.
